About me:

Shankar's paintings are a visual record of the human's direct and invisible communion with their love for music and nature. Inspiration to him comes from everything he sees, feels and experiences. His work is a reflection of his thoughts and nostalgic memories, significantly visualised through him on the canvass. His process of painting is a constant state of renewal and experimentation and his intuitive trust in this process brings out unforeseen results. The depiction of cow and village huts are a rendition of beatific instances from his childhood days spent in a village. Often these instances are combined with human figures bearing a seraphic smile demonstrating their heartfelt association with animals or music. The play of colors in his artwork and the artist's effort to express meaning and spiritual experience rather than physical reality, brings an unfeigned delight to the viewers. His works also tend to focus on mythology and the evolution of man and his material wealth.
